Flash Flooding Safety
Emergency Management Message

The recent deaths in Nova Scotia highlight the power of rapidly-moving water when heavy rains and thunderstorms produce flash floods. If flooding hits, stay safe by staying clear of flowing water, especially at night, and by avoiding submerged bridges and roads and staying away from swollen creeks and rivers.

It does not take much rapidly-moving water for disaster to strike when you drive or walk into a flooded area:

- 15 centimetres (six inches) of fast-moving water can knock over and sweep away an adult.
- 30 centimetres (one foot) can wash away a small car.
- 45-60 centimetres (18-24 inches) of water with a swift current carry away a pickup truck or SUV.

If flash floods block your path, find a safer, dryer route to your destination. Turn around — do not drown.
